

While Sean Robbins began his musical journey in rural Puna, Hawai'i, where he was born and raised, his music has reached audiences throughout the world. Robbins is quickly being recognized as one of Hawaii's top young artists as his music can be heard on radio stations throughout Hawai'i. Robbins' hit single Ka Lehua might, in fact, be the first thing you hear upon arriving in the islands as it's currently being featured aboard Hawaiian Airlines. As a young composer, his melodies have been described as pure to the ear and soul. His talent for songwriting and musicianship was recognized from an early age as he was taken under the wing of legendary Hawaiian artist Cyril Pahinui and, at age 15, performed on National Public Radio's From the Top program. In late 2014, Pahinui produced Robbins' debut album, Olanui, which went on to win a Hōkū in the Nā Hōkū Hanohano Awards with Robbins also being nominated for most promising artist of the year. Recently returning home from his self-produced Olanui tour with Miss Aloha Hula Nāmakana Davis Lim, he will be live in concert at the Honolulu Museum of Art's Doris Duke Theatre on April 20th. Robbins currently resides in Mānoa valley, where he's collaborating with some of Hawaiian music's top names in preparation for his sophomore release.
